

55 INT. SCHOOL HALLWAY - DAY

55

Principal Hamel walks through the hallway. Trent follows him. Principal Hamel stops and looks back over his shoulder.

Trent darts into a group of students.

TRENT FRANTZ

Hey. How are you guys doing today?
Can you believe how hard that math homework was?

Principal Hamel continues walking.

Me neither. Gotta go.

Trent resumes his pursuit.

Principal Hamel stops again and looks over his shoulder.

Trent leans over the water fountain.

Now that's good H2O. They should bottle this stuff.

Trent looks up and notices that Principal Hamel has disappeared.

Fanon, where did he go? Me? You were suppose to keep an eye on him.
I was blending in. Come on. We'll talk about this after class.

Trent walks into a classroom.

Liz walks down the hallway with EMILY ALBRO.

LIZ STRICKLAND

Principal Hamel has been looking for you. You can't keep skipping classes. How do you expect to pass if you're never present?

EMILY ALBRO

Schools are fascist prisons for kids. They don't prepare us for the real world. I don't want them. I don't need them.

LIZ STRICKLAND

I'm sorry you feel that way now but one day you're going to wake up and realize that you're nothing without a proper education.
